

This 1873 map displays a fairly well occupied urban territory up to Bloor, at least between Parliament and about Strachan Street (by old Garrison Creek on the west). East of Parliament, the area of Cabbagetown that reached to the Don was steadily filling — often with British immigrants — as a workers' residential district above the eastern industrial area. West of Strachan Street, the creek valleys north from about the Trinity College grounds slowed development. But this western quarter, too, saw growing settlement of workers employed in industries (like Massey) around the rail lines. Well-to-do residential areas were rising northward around Queen's Park, and up Sherbourne and Jarvis near the Horticultural (Allan) Gardens.

The Margaret Eaton School Digital Collection is a not-for-profit resource created in 2014-2015 to assist scholars, researchers, educators, and students to discover the Margaret Eaton School archives housed in the Peter Turkstra Library at Redeemer University College. Copyright of the digital images is the property of Redeemer University College, Ancaster, Canada and the images may not be copied or emailed to multiple sites without the copyright holder's express written permission. However, users may print, download, or email digital images for individual non-commercial use. To learn more about this project or to search the digital collection, go to <http://libguides.redeemer.ca/mes>.